Grad Assistant

I am a full time musician and masters student at NCCU. I stand for unity, applicable education, and youth development. I enjoy working with a team and contributing in a way that helps us move towards our collective goals. I've worked with several teams in sports, restaurants and music settings for the last 13 years, sometimes simultaneously. I'm very interested in digital software and have passion for technological development along with its benefits in modern society. I was a participant in the Duke-NCCU Digital Humanities Partnership using "story maps" which is a software program for digital presentations. I'm up to date on basic digital technologies such as Word, PowerPoint, Excel and more. I volunteered for the Regional Baha'i Institute in service of African American youth in my community (Durham, NC) post-graduation. I have a bachelors in vocal jazz performance from North Carolina Central University.
